A WORD FROM YOUR CEO

Our Work on the Emily Mine Project >>>

As an electric cooperative, Crow Wing Power's top priority has always been to provide our members with safe and reliable electric service at a reasonable price.

Over the years, we have continued to reinvest in our infrastructure, technology and equipment, while keeping costs under control and expanding services for our members. We take great pride in our mission and strive to find better ways to serve our members as an energy provider and member of the community.

CROW WING POWER'S BUSINESS SUCCESS

Along the way, Crow Wing Power has pursued several successful business opportunities to help us expand revenue and add value for members. After all, a strong business portfolio can minimize risk, provide more services and contribute to lower electric rates to our members.

Crow Wing Power's business ventures include People's Security, the Credit Union, Access Plus (our development of T-Mobile towers and eventual sale of those assets), Business/Industrial Park for Xcel Energy and more recently the redevelopment and sale of Hunt Technologies. These business developments have resulted in many benefits for Crow Wing Power members, including investments in Right of Way clearing and infrastructure improvements that have greatly improved service and reliability, reduced power outages and returned profits in the form of checks to members.

In fact, with the sale of Hunt Technologies in 2007, we directly returned $12 million in profits to our members, with an average distribution to members of $350.

THE PURCHASE OF THE EMILY MINE

Crow Wing Power acquired the land and mining rights in 2008 for the Emily deposit from the Carlton Group, using proceeds from the profitable sale of Hunt Technologies, a subsidiary of CWP. The Carlton Group continues to have an investment interest in the mine. We anticipate the Emily project will be a profitable venture for our members in the future.

STATUS OF THE PROJECT

Over the past few weeks, the Emily project has been the subject of multiple local newspaper articles about its management and its progress. While we welcome efforts to inform the public about Crow Wing's operations, the news coverage has led to some confusing and sometimes contradicting accounts about the status of the project, possible investment partners and who will profit from the eventual mining activities.

I want to be as transparent as possible with you about all of Crow Wing Power's activities and investments, so I will do my best to review where the project stands and how we got here. Early on, we expected mining could begin in less than five years if borehole mining – the use of high-pressure water jets for extraction proved feasible. Unfortunately, we discovered in 2011 that the ground was too compact for this technique to work.

A few vocal critics, including the Carlton Group, have expressed frustration that the mining project isn't already up and running. Frankly, we share their desire to see it operational as soon as possible, as long as Crow Wing's 38,000 members are protected from excessive risk.

THE SEARCH FOR AN ADDITIONAL PARTNER

The failure of the borehole mining strategy required us to find a new way to move forward. More extensive testing has been required to determine the best approach for mining the manganese and iron, and Crow Wing needs an experienced partner to join the project.

For the past several years, we have been pursuing mining partners. Talks have been active with multiple investment groups. In fact, the Crow Wing Power Board of Directors heard a presentation on Jan. 17 from a potential investor that appears to be quite promising.

At this time, Crow Wing leadership can't publicly disclose potential investors or the offers being exchanged. Any groups with a serious proposal will ask to negotiate privately and require non-disclosure/confidentiality agreements. These are standard business practices, and refusal to protect confidentiality would place a potential agreement at serious risk.

We are becoming more optimistic in our ability to transition to a successful mining project in the next few years. Your elected board members will ultimately have final voice concerning any agreement, further protecting the interests of our members.

HOW I AM COMPENSATED

Now let me take a moment to address my role in this project and questions about royalty payments and potential conflicts of interest.

For many years, our member-elected board of directors has chosen a leadership structure whereby the cooperative's executive team manages all of CWP's business subsidiaries. The board believes this is the way to maintain proper oversight and control over these investments in the best interest of our members.

The majority of the board doesn't see a conflict with this structure for managing CWP's assets and neither do CWP executives. I appreciate the board's trust, and the staff works hard every day to validate their faith.

In most cases, our leadership manages CWP's subsidiaries without additional compensation. With the Emily project, however, I have received a supplement to my salary that totaled $42,000 last year.

Further, two recently retired CWP executives and I have been eligible for a royalty, based on our ability to quickly move into production. But since the mine is still in the development stage, no royalty payments have been made.

In fact, for quite some time, we have said those royalties had essentially expired because contract terms would need to be renegotiated when a new mining partner joins the project, and a new agreement should not include royalties.

SUMMARY – WE OWN A GREAT ASSET

To be clear, we remain deeply confident in this investment. The Emily manganese deposit is the richest known deposit of its kind in North America - between four and ten billion pounds of this important mineral is there for extraction.

Manganese is a critical mineral for steel production, battery storage and electric vehicle batteries. To better position our cooperative for the future, we decided to embrace the renewable energy renaissance by making a long-term investment in this important Minnesota resource.

We expect our subsidiary Hunt Enterprises will either continue as a partner in the project or will sell its interest to a company with expertise in mining. Of course, the Board of Directors will have final say on a new mining partner, new contract terms or the sale of CWP's interests in the project.

No matter how quickly our current business investor wants to proceed, we will continue to evaluate next steps based on what is in the best interest of our 38,000 members.

We work hard to make sure our members understand our business operations and finances. If any member has a question about the Emily project, please call me at 1-800-648-9401 or 829-2827. You can also email me at info@cwpower.com

I'll keep you informed,

Lakes Area Restorative Justice Project Wins Community Award

Lakes Area Restorative Justice Program (LARJP) is this year's recipient of Crow Wing Power's Minnesota Touchstone Energy Cooperative's Commitment to Community award. LARJP was selected because of the positive impact they have had on juvenile offenders and their victims.

LARJP provides a program that enables those victimized by a juvenile crime to express their feelings and losses with the person who did the crime to them and share what that victim experienced and the harmful effects it has had on them. The juvenile is face to face with a person or persons they did wrong to and see the pain they have caused. Offenders usually are able to come to grips about the deed(s). Ultimately, there is a sincere apology letter and written contractual agreement, which validates the victim and gives the offender the opportunity for restitution and community service.

When a case is completed successfully, it allows emotional healing between all parties, which creates a stronger, healthier community.

LARJP is currently the only Restorative Justice Program in Crow Wing County. They have provided services to juveniles in Crow Wing County for 13 years.

LARJP gets case referrals from the County Attorney's office and six county Police Departments as well as the schools in Crow Wing County. They serve on average 40-50 cases per year. By completing the contract the offender's record is cleared which allows and empowers them to have a greater educational and employment opportunity as an adult.

Sample Case:

The county attorney referred two juveniles involved in cabin break-ins to LARJP. One of the cabin's belonged to family with two young boys, who were now afraid to go to the cabin because of the "bogeymen". During the conference between the offenders and the family, they could see the scared kids and were sincerely apologetic—even tearful. They said they were finding positive friends and activities and working to earn money for restitution. At the close, they shook hands with the family and even the two boys.

LARJP received $500 and their application was sent to the Statewide Touchstone group for consideration of the overall statewide winner. We are pleased to announce that LARJP was selected as the statewide winner. They will be presented with this award and $1,000 during the MN Rural Electric Association's annual meeting in February.
